Great Books Listed By English Dept.

By Norma Beatty

If you are a typical senior you probably feel you haven't learned enough in four years.

For 25 cents you can continue your education after graduation.

The English department has compiled a general reading list of great books for its majors. The list is now available for all University students at a cost of only 25 cents, and can be picked up at the English office in the LA building.

According to Dr. Leslie Fiedler, the 10-page mimeographed list includes what the entire English department considers to be the very best works since the beginning of literature.

Beginning with old English and Anglo-Latin poetry and prose, the list proceeds through these major divisions: middle English poetry and prose exclusive of Chaucer; Chaucer; English drama from 1550-1642; English prose from 1550-1642; English poetry from 1550-1660; Spenser, Donne and Milton; Shakespeare; Restoration and XVIII Century drama; Dryden, Swift and Pope; Johnson and his circle; English fiction before 1800;

English literature from 1790-1890—romantic poetry; English literature from 1790-1890—Victorian poetry; English literature from 1790-1890, fiction; English literature from 1790-1890, prose; American writers before 1890; poetry since 1890; English fiction since 1890; drama since 1890; and American prose writers since 1890.

Skimming through the list a few of the writers and poets are Ernest Hemingway, William Faulkner, Eugene O'Neill, Sigmund Freud, Tolstol, Thomas Mann, James Joyce, T. S. Eliot, Walt Whitman, Mark Twain, Charles Dickens, Goethe, and Molire.

Ducats Selling 'Smoothly' For Foresters' Ball

Ticket sales for the Foresters ball are going "smoothly" as last-minute preparation of the Field House gets underway. Last night after the regular meeting of the Forestry club, members began to put up the decorations that would not interfere with basketball practice.

The Forestry club is not the only party getting ready for the ball, though. This afternoon a "miner" from Garnet, an old ghost town, is going to ride his burro down to the Gin'ral Store (The Mercantile) to purchase a pair of corduroy trousers to wear to the ball. It seems that the last paper he read carried an ad from the Merc advertising that apparel as the latest thing in men's fancy duds.

Jubileers Will Present Butte Recitals Today

The MSU Jubileers, under the direction of Prof. Lloyd Oakland, are giving two programs in Butte today, one at the high school and the other in the Butte Rotary club.

Featured in their program are arrangements by Don Hardisty, graduate assistant in the music school, and the Jubileers will also sing selections from the forthcoming All-School production "Carousel." Hardisty, a Butte high school graduate, will also conduct two numbers in the 40 minute program.

Associate Posts Open To Students

Applications for associate editors of the Kaimin must be handed in at the Kaimin editor's office by 3 p.m. today, according to Rick Lee, Butte, chairman of Publications board.

Publications board will meet at 3 p.m. today in J-211 to select four associates for the next three quarters. Associates must have worked on the Kaimin staff or have had newspaper experience. They are paid $10 a month.

Applicants for the positions do not have to be journalism majors, Lee said, as long as they have the necessary practical experience. The Kaimin is a paper for the entire campus, and students majoring in other fields are urged to apply if they can meet the requirements.

MSU Grad to Discuss Foreign Service Work

Tobias Hartwick, Foreign Service officer, will talk to students interested in career opportunities in the State department and its Foreign Service at 3 p.m. Friday in LA 104.

Mr. Hartwick, a graduate of the MSU history and political science department, will also address the International Relations club in the same room one hour later. Mr. Hartwick is not recruiting for the State department but will talk to all interested students at the 3 o'clock meeting at request of the history and political science department.

Work Progressing On Bowling Alleys

Construction of the new bowling alleys in the basement of the Women's Center is progressing more rapidly than anticipated, said Earl W. Martell, director of activities and facilities yesterday.

The date set for completion is March 1, and it looks as if they may be ready, Martell added. The bowling center, which is to include six alleys, is to be open to all students and faculty members.

Costs for bowling will be 30 cents per line for open bowling and 35 cents per line for league play. Intramural arrangements are to be worked out spring quarter.

The alleys will be available to physical education classes from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and any unused portion of this time may be used for open bowling. Open bowling will be from 4:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. and from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m.

First Come, First Served Predicted Admission Basis

By NORMA BEATTY

Enrollment on a "first come, first served" basis will be one of the main factors in determining who will be admitted to MSU next fall.

According to Dr. Harold Chatland, dean of the faculty, the budget, which was cut 7 per cent this year will not provide for sufficient instructors to permit the University to accept all applicants for admittance. He said, "We are able to provide the room, light, and heat to make the student comfortable but not the instructors to educate him."

Dr. Chatland was one member of a five-member panel which discussed "Controlled Enrollment at MSU" last night in the Music school auditorium. Other members were Mrs. Dallas Reed, a former member of the state legislature; Dr. Vernon Sletten, of the School of Education; Gary Cowan, Livingston, student in the law school; and Jim Abbott, Kalispell, moderator. The forum was sponsored by Montana Forum, a weekly discussion group on campus.

In discussing the problem of increased enrollment without a budget to cover it, four solutions were given. They were:

(1) Raise the student fees. Chatland said that out of 54 institutions of a comparative size, MSU was third or fourth from the bottom. He said this includes a small university which has no fees at all. "If we were to double our fees for Montana students and triple them for out of state students," Chatland said, "We would be just below the middle of the list."

Mrs. Reed said that nine out of the 11 western states have raised their fees.

(2) Lower standards by being so bad no one would want to come here. However, the dean of the faculty said this method would get rid of staff members faster than anything else. Chatland said standards could be lowered by increasing the teaching load, and overloading his classes which would make his teaching ineffective.

(3) Conduct a curriculum investigation. The University is undergoing such an investigation at the present time in which any courses which duplicate each other, might be eliminated.

(4) Make a statewide study of the problem. Mrs. Reed pointed out that in New Mexico such a study was made of seven state institutions. Because their study did give answers to the problem Mrs. Reed suggested that a similar research program be carried out in Montana.

Now Seek Unity

Mrs. Reed said that a year ago, governors of the 11 western states met and decided that education was at a crossroads—that something needed to be done to have a unity of purpose, a unity of effort, an interchange of ideas on the situation. A resolution was passed asking that a committee be set up by appointing a member of the house and senate from each state to meet on the education issue.

Gov. J. Hugo Aronson appointed Paul Working of Wilsall and Mrs. Reed to this committee. The committee met and soon realized that the increased enrollment problem goes far beyond the college level, but is everywhere beginning with the elementary schools. After the first meeting, it was decided to continue the work of the committee.

MSU Expects Increase

Considering the enrollment increase, Dr. Sletten said MSU is in the third group of schools that has an expected enrollment increase of 51-75 per cent by 1970. He said "this increase is not an indication that there are more students eligible for college, it's just that more students want to go to college."

Sletten did add one bright note however. He said "because Montana is in the third group of schools, it is not nearly as bad off as the first group which has an expected enrollment increase of 100 per cent."

Oakland Tells Conducting History From Early Greek to Present

Conductors now enjoy the same renown that composers do, Lloyd Oakland, professor of music, said Tuesday, but this prestige was at first unknown to them.

Prof. Oakland, addressing the Liberal Arts club, gave a brief history of conducting. The early Greek tapped his foot, wearing a specially made metal-soled shoe, when leading the members of the choruses.

Musical scores in the early history of the art were unheard of, and the only person who knew the tune was the leader of the chorus.

Prof. Oakland said that he likes to think that conductors were responsible for the first written notations of music, which was done by the Greeks. They used figures called "neumes," from which our present half-note signs evolved.

The neumes date from the eighth century. Around 900, the first score developed. It consisted of one line, with a letter in front, which gave the pitch.

The Gregorian period saw the development of the four-line staff, which Prof. Oakland said was used for quite a long time before being replaced by the present-day five line staff.

The Precentors, who directed the choruses of the Crusades used the method known as "Chironomy." This is, roughly, indicating the rise and fall of pitch with the hands.

This practice lasted until about the fifteenth century, when the measure bars were added. This was a great misfortune for music, according to Prof. Oakland, because ever since that time, music has been saddled with the necessity of conforming to regularity.

With the addition of the measure bars, conductors were free to beat time with their hands; a stick was added, and the evolution of the conductor was nearly complete.

In the seventeenth century, conducting began to gain in prestige, and became very ostentatious. Prof. Oakland told of a system of using jeweled canes in place of the foot to beat time to the music.

A famous conductor who used this method died because of his devotion to it. He misdirected a tap, his cane hit his gouty foot, gangrene set in, and he died shortly afterwards.

Also during the seventeenth century, conductors used instruments to direct their orchestras. This practice was followed until full harmony was introduced.

Mosel, a famous violinist-conductor of the early nineteenth century, introduced the baton. At first members of the orchestra reacted to this, but from this first use, the baton has been an expressive instrument.

The introduction of full harmony also marked the end of a long line of composer-conductors, and started the new line of great conductors. Great conductors now not only need to know the operation of each instrument but also must know how to recompose the work to be played.

"A great conductor is not one who has great musicians," Prof. Oakland said, "rather, he is one who makes his musicians great."

Budget-Finance Approves Pub-Travel Expenditures

Publicity-Travel committee expenditures totaling $400 were approved recently by Budget-Finance. The committee last week appropriated $100 to the rifle team, $150 to high school leadership camp, and $150 to the College and Career Days program.

The group devoted its Tuesday meeting to ironing out details on three forthcoming projects. Speakers and brochures were discussed in connection with the April leadership camp to be conducted on campus. A student "car caravan" is being organized for the Butte Booster night at the Field House March 3. The meeting closed after discussion of student participation in the "Career Days" program scheduled for March and April in cities throughout the state.

EDITORIALLY...

Today was originally set for the election of a chairman for Judicial council. Fortunately the primary election day was moved ahead a week, to next Thursday. The general election will be conducted two weeks from today, March 8.

Delay was wise. Many students still do not understand the significance of this council, and Elections chairman Bill Crawford says 40 per cent of the student body must vote to make the election valid.

Judicial council is significant. To state its powers briefly, Judicial council will be able to expel any of us. A college education can double your lifetime earning power. We don't want some blockhead or blue nose taking that away without justification.

First Nineteen Students Take Law Tests

Nineteen students took the first law school Educational Testing Service aptitude tests of Princeton, N.J. last Saturday morning, according to Dean Robert E. Sullivan. The tests took approximately three and one-half hours to complete.

Dean Sullivan said that the majority of the students were from the campus, but there were some from Great Falls, Helena, Butte, and towns throughout the state.

Montana State University is one of around 50 schools in the country that gave the test on Feb. 18. It was taken by persons all over the continental United States, and administered to prospective law students overseas by the armed forces.

Dean Sullivan said that the next date for the test will be April 21. Applications for that test may be obtained from the Dean's office in the law school.

A ten dollar fee is charged for taking the test, Dean Sullivan said, and is mailed directly to Princeton. He emphasized the fact that the only part played by the MSU law school in the tests is the administering of them.

The tests arrive in sealed envelopes from the Princeton office of the Educational Testing Service, and are opened for the first time when the test is given.

Immediately after the answer sheets are turned in by the students, they are mailed to Princeton where they are graded. Then the results are returned to MSU.

Horsemanship Students Should Register on Time

MSU classes in horsemanship will go "out on the trail" during spring quarter. As a result Mrs. Lynn Wolfe, horsemanship instructor, wants students planning to take the course to be doubly sure that they sign up during registration period starting Monday.

"We will try to accommodate late registrants," she said, but explained that she must have a good idea of how many horses she'll need prior to the start of classes.

There will be fewer and longer classes spring quarter, Mrs. Wolfe added. This will give students additional time to "get out in the hills" during class time.
